

OUR TEAM

The Mayor's Smart City Task Force was established in January 2018. It is a cross-section of community partners and thought leaders in technical innovation, entrepreneurship and social innovation. It has representatives from the non-profit, university and startup and business sectors.

The task force was established in January with three main roles and objectives:

- To provide direction, input and advice on challenges and opportunities that should be acted on to make Fredericton a smarter city.
- To inspire collaboration with other task force members and the City to create new partnerships that provide social and economic impact through a smart cities approach.
- To develop innovative project ideas that provide social and economic impact.

The task force was given the responsibility of developing the application for the Smart Cities Challenge.

Task force members and additional key stakeholders have come together as part of the Smart Cities Challenge Team to foster collaboration and innovation on social, technical and entrepreneurial partnerships, move forward the five pilot projects, and help develop a winning final proposal.

Over 20 organizations including more than 40 people, are working directly on the development of our final proposal:

- City of Fredericton
- Saint Mary's First Nation
- Fredericton Public Library
- Stan Cassidy Centre
- University of New Brunswick
- NBCC
